

European Elections 2014 Project

The European Elections 2014 is a flagship project of the Open Society Initiative for Europe (OSIFE) that views European elections in 2014 – including national and local elections in key countries such as France, Hungary and the Netherlands – as a pivotal moment that can either rejuvenate or seriously harm European democracy, a test of the depth of the gap between governments and citizens on European integration. The European Parliamentary elections in May 2014 present a crucial opportunity for citizens and civil society actors to help influence and shape the agenda of the European Union in the EU's legislative period 2015-2019. OSIFE identified three main aims: 1) to support projects that amplify the voice and demands of constituencies that are far from the centers of power, 2) to fight all types of hate speech, and 3) to mobilize voters to take part in this rare political moment of transnational democracy.

This document lists all the elections-related grants that OSIFE is supporting through the European Elections 2014 project (open call grants, targeted mobilization efforts, up-scaling grants and grants related to post-election actions), the Hungary project, the Italy project and the Open Society Fund to Counter Xenophobia, as well as election grants from the At Home in Europe and European Civil Liberties projects. Finally, there is an election-related legacy grant from the Open Society Youth Initiative and a co-funded project of OSIFE with the OSF Information Program.

Acuerdo	Radical Europe: The populist challenge	EU-wide (spotlight on FR, HU, SK)	The purpose of this grant is to create an interactive news-story as a snapshot of the current anti-European forces through a political-fiction experiment built with journalistic elements: an imaginary state. This fictional country has three levels of representation – local, regional, and national level – all based on real examples of contemporary Europe, namely from France, Slovakia and Hungary. The aim is to show the reader how these forces behave once they come to power and do it through an interactive mosaic.	02/17/2014-05/25/2014	Mr. Pedro García Campos pedro@acuerdo.us	USD 15,598.38
AEGEE-Europe	Europe on Track	AT, BE, BG, CZ, DE, ES, FR, GR, HR, HU, IT, NL, PL, RO, and SK	The purpose of this grant is to ensure that AEGEE's already existing, award winning (2013 Charlemagne Youth Prize) project Europe on Track will reach its full potential of motivating thousands of young Europeans to participate in the European Parliamentary elections 2014. During these tours the volunteers engaged with people via street actions, flash mobs, panel discussions, workshops, interviews, information booths, and face to face meetings. The travel route included Belgium, Netherlands, Germany, Poland, Czech Republic, Austria, Slovakia, Hungary, Greece, Bulgaria, Romania, Croatia, Italy, Spain, and France.	02/01/2014 - 10/01/2014	Mr. Luis Alvarado president@aegee.org	USD 32,268.00

EUobserver ASBL	Open EU 2014	EU level with focus on AT, BE, BG, DE, ES, FI, FR, GR, HR, HU, IT, NL, PL, RO, SE, and UK	This project uses professional news reporting to foster debate on how open society values are under stress in the run up to the European elections. Topics include the rise of hate speech by Europe's far right, the increased use of intolerant rhetoric and policies by mainstream politicians, as well as the rise in hate crime on the streets of Europe. EUobserver recruited experienced, local journalists to visit campaign events, conduct interviews and solicit high-level op-eds in 16 countries. By "going local", EUobserver was able to point out worrying cross-border trends, rather than merely report on isolated incidents. EUobserver ASBL	Beyond Brussels	EU-wide	Through this project EUobserver aim to fill the gap in journalism on what EU-level decisions mean at a national level, and what national decisions mean for the EU. Most media have, until now, taken a top-down approach by posting reporters to Brussels to cover EU policy-making. However, EUobserver is proposing a bottom-up approach, by recruiting a network of independent journalists in EU capitals to cover the impact of those policies and to highlight important local events. The journalists will co-operate on cross-border stories which are often invisible at the national level. This project will help the public hold EU leaders to account and give new feedback to policy makers, helping to support European democracy in a practical way.	01/01/2015 - 08/31/2016	Ms. Meg Chang mc@euobserver.com	USD 75,000.00

They reached out to citizens who are less likely to actively take part in the European Parliament elections, particularly young people, through six transnational caravan tours, election parties, a dedicated website (voiceofthevoiceless.eu), video interviews, and an online communication campaign which uses humor and satire. The project has a strong activists and community-based nature, thanks to the collaboration with local NGOs, stakeholders, activists, and volunteers.	01/06/2014 - 06/30/2014	Mr. Alessandro Valera a.valera@euroalter.com	USD 49,500.00

The Campus and the evaluation meeting together will try to decipher the impact of projects that seek to reach out to citizens and engage them in the political process. Foundation for an Open Society (formerly Soros Foundation Romania)	European Elections 2014: countering the rise of hate-speech	RO	The primary goal is applying a combination of naming and shaming and satire to counter the rise of hate-speech in the discourse of both extremist politicians and mainstream political parties, which is negatively affecting, both in the short and long term, the LGBT community, Roma, and women. The main hypothesis of the project is that just as xenophobic public speech can affect attitudes and behavior, the absence of it, or the public condemnation of such statements, can lead to xenophobic attitudes becoming less tolerated. The Soros Foundation Romania wants to test this hypothesis both in the specific context of European elections as well as during Romania's presidential elections in November 2014.	01/01/2014 - 12/31/2014	Mr. Ovidiu Voicu ovoicu@soros .ro	USD 91,500.00

In order to determine the positions of all EU candidates this VAA, which is an improved version of the award-winning “EU Profiler” that was co-developed by Kieskompas for the 2009 EU elections, uses candidate’s election promises as expressed in official documents. An important characteristic of this VAA is that it does not give one-sided voting advice. Rather, it positions each user in the political landscape, giving the user a nuanced portrayal of his or her distance from all parties in the political spectrum.	01/01/2014 - 10/01/2014	Mr. Oscar Moreda Laguna oscar@kieskompas.nl	USD 117,280.80
